Côte d'Ivoire

SIGI Country Profile

6 October 2025

SIGI Country Profiles are produced by the OECD Development Centre. Commended and supported by Italy's G7 presidency, these SIGI Country Profiles for Africa focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment.

The information and analysis contained in this profile are based on data from the fifth edition of the Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI) published in March 2023. The cut-off date for legal data is 31 August 2022; the cut-off date for quantitative data is 1 January 2023.

Foreword

The SIGI 2023 profile for Côte d'Ivoire provides a comprehensive overview of the state of gender equality in the country with a focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment, as measured by the OECD's Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI). The fifth edition of the SIGI, released in 2023, assesses 140 countries based on the level of gender-based discrimination in their social institutions. These discriminatory social institutions encompass both formal and informal laws, as well as social norms and practices that restrict women's and girls' access to rights, justice, empowerment opportunities and resources, thereby undermining their agency and authority.

Specifically, the SIGI measures gender-based discrimination across four dimensions covering the major socio-economic areas that affect women and girls throughout their lifetime:

- The "Discrimination in the family" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's decision-making power and weaken their status in the household and the family.
- The "Restricted physical integrity" dimension captures social institutions that increase women's and girls' vulnerability to multiple forms of violence and limit their control over their reproductive autonomy.
- The "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's economic opportunities and rights.
- The "Restricted civil liberties" dimension captures social institutions restricting women's access to, and participation and voice in, the public and political spheres.

Each dimension builds on four indicators which, in turn, build on one to three variables depending on data availability (Figure 1). When there are no data gaps, each indicator includes one legal variable, one attitudinal variable and one practice variable. Levels of discrimination in the SIGI and its dimensions are assessed based on scores as follow: very low [0-20]; low [20-30]; medium [30-40]; high [40-50]; and very high [50-100].

The state of gender equality in Côte d'Ivoire

Overall, Côte d'Ivoire was among those countries classified as having very low levels of gender discrimination based on the SIGI 2023 score (17). For comparison, the average score in the Africa region is 40 while the global average is 29. Across the SIGI's four dimensions, the SIGI score shows lower discrimination in "Discrimination in the family" (12) and "Restricted civil liberties" (13) and higher levels of discrimination in "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" (15) and "Restricted physical integrity" (29).

Positive highlights and significant challenges

Positive highlights

- The legal framework upholds women's right to productive and financial assets through equal rights for women and men with regards to inheritance, access to land and non-land assets, and financial services.
- Compared to regional peers, women's workplace rights are well protected within the existing legal framework, and women make up a high share among managers (57%).
- Between 2019 and 2021 several legislative improvements have been introduced in Côte d'Ivoire. This includes a new marriage law that established the minimum legal age of marriage for both men and women at 18, with no exceptions, and a reform of the Penal Code to introduce the concept of consent into the definition of rape and criminalise domestic violence.

Significant challenges

- Despite legal reforms, some gaps remain in the legislation pertaining violence against women, particularly in how domestic violence, sexual harassment and rape are defined. Addressing this is pertinent, given that 43% of women have views that justify intimate-partner violence.
- Despite rather comprehensive legal frameworks with regards to asset ownership and access to financial services, women lag notably behind men in ownership of land, property and bank accounts.
- Although national level data on discriminatory attitudes and practices is available, it is not always comparable to indicators included in global surveys.

³ A natural boy-to-girl sex ratio at birth is generally estimated to be below 105. A ratio exceeding 105 implies the existence of more boys aged 0-4 than one would expect, indicating a potential phenomenon of son preference resulting in the systemic elimination of new-born girls.

⁴ % of married or in-union women of reproductive age who want to either stop or delay childbearing but are not using any contraception method.

Social and institutional determinants of violence against women and girls

Violence against women is a global pandemic, with disastrous effects on girls' and women's health and well-being. Moreover, violence against women is rarely an isolated incidence, but often part of patterns of abuse sustained by deeply entrenched but harmful social norms and gender stereotypes.¹ As such, it is more than an interpersonal issue - it is a wider societal problem with consequences on countries' development and welfare.

The United Nations define violence against women as wide range of harmful acts that are rooted in unequal power relations between men and women and that result in - or are likely to result in - physical, sexual or mental harm or suffering to women.² At the global level, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women (CEDAW) adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1979 and particularly the General recommendation No. 35 of 2017 recognise the importance of ending gender-based violence against women. In Africa, the Maputo Protocol³ calls on state parties to eliminate all forms of discrimination against women and adopt the needed measures to end and prevent violence against women. The SIGI adopts a life-cycle approach to violence against women and girls covering several types of violence (see Figure 3). This section assesses how social norms and legal frameworks determine girls' and women's risk of being subjected to any of these types of violence.

Violence against women

Practices and social norms related to violence against women

Violence against women remains a concern in Côte d'Ivoire. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 27% of women aged 15-49 have experienced physical and/or sexual violence by a current or former partner at least once during their lifetime, and 15% of women aged more than 15 have experienced such violence at least once over the last 12 months.⁴

These levels of intimate-partner violence are rooted in its widespread social acceptance. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 43% of women aged 15-49 think that it is justified for a husband to hit or beat his wife under certain circumstances, such as burning the food, arguing with the spouse, going out without telling him, neglecting the children, or refusing to have sex. In comparison, 28% of women hold these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 37% across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning violence against women

Côte d'Ivoire does not have a law specifically addressing violence against women since Law No. 98-757 of December 23, 1998 on the repression of certain forms of violence against women was repealed. Domestic violence is covered under Articles 383, 385, 401, 402, 419-2, 444, 445, and 450-5, of the Penal Code⁵. These frameworks include physical, psychological and economic abuse, but not sexual abuse. Furthermore, although the legal definition of rape is grounded on lack of consent as defined by Articles

⁴ This indicator corresponds to SDG indicator 5.2.1

⁵ Côte d'Ivoire (2019), "Law No. 2019-574 of June 26, 2019 on the Penal Code".

403 of the Penal Code, proof of penetration is required for prosecution. Additionally, although Articles 405-409, 418, 419, 419-1, 419-2 of the Penal Code prohibits sexual harassment, legal protections are only explicitly specified for the workplace and not for educational establishments, public places and online/the internet.

Child marriage

Practices related to child marriage

Child marriage remains a concern in Côte d'Ivoire, primarily affecting girls. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 18% of girls aged 15-19 were or are still married, divorced, widowed or in an informal union, compared to 1% of boys. In addition, 27% of women aged 20-24 were married or in a union before the age of 18,⁶ compared to a world average of 26% and an average of 31% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning child marriage

⁶ This indicator corresponds to SDG indicator 5.3.1

While the statutory laws governing child marriage set the legal marriage age at 18 years old for women and men, evidence shows that the informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
What is the legal age of marriage for men?	18	✓

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C)

Practices and social norms related to FGM/C

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) is traditionally concentrated in a limited number of countries that have been well-identified and documented by international organisations at the forefront of the fight against this harmful practice. Yet, evidence highlights that FGM/C takes place across all regions, among indigenous and/or diaspora communities originating from countries where FGM/C is known to be common. In some contexts, girls are taken across national borders to undergo FGM/C in a country where the legislation against the practice is either non-existent or less strict.⁷

Based on the latest available data in 2023, female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) remains present in Côte D'Ivoire, with 37% of women aged 15-49 who have undergone the practice. Moreover, 21% of women think that the practice of FGM/C should continue.

Legal frameworks concerning FGM/C

Article 5 of the Constitution of Côte d'Ivoire⁸ and Articles 394, 395 and 397 of the Penal Code⁹ allow for the prosecution of FGM/C on both narrow and broad grounds, specifically as acts of permanent altering, infibulation and genital mutilation.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on broad or narrow grounds?	Yes	✓
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on narrow grounds only?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow or encourage FGM/C?	Yes	!
Does the law take precedence over informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow, condone or prescribe FGM?	Yes	✓

⁹ Côte d'Ivoire (2019), "Law No. 2019-574 of June 26, 2019 on the Penal Code".

Note: The SIGI methodology assesses laws on FGM/C according to two scenarios: (1) criminalisation on narrow grounds includes laws that contain criminal penalties for acts of “female genital mutilation”, “permanent altering/removal of external genitalia”, “female circumcision”, “excision”, “infibulation” and “genital mutilation”; (2) criminalisation on broad grounds includes “mutilation”, “harming of a person’s organs”, “serious bodily injury” and “bodily injury/hurt/assault.” The presence of informal laws that allow or encourage FGM/C is proxied by the existence of nationally representative data on FGM/C or the existence of indirect estimates (usually used in countries where FGM/C is mainly practiced by diaspora communities), small-scale studies, or anecdotal evidence and media reports as reported by Equality Now, the End FGM European Network and the US End FGM/C Network in 2020.

Social and institutional determinants of women's economic empowerment

Women's economic empowerment is a cornerstone of gender equality and a critical driver of sustainable development. It enables women to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from economic growth, thereby reducing income inequality, boosting productivity, and fostering innovation (UN Women, 2018)¹⁰ (Equality Now, 2020)¹¹. As such, advancing women's economic empowerment is essential to realising the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and building resilient, inclusive societies. Beyond structural factors, social and institutional determinants hold an important sway on women's economic empowerment - including their access to resources and economic opportunities. This section offers insights to what extent social norms and legal frameworks support or restrict women's economic empowerment in Côte d'Ivoire, providing detailed information on the following SIGI indicators: Inheritance; Access to land assets; Access to non-land assets; Access to financial services; and Workplace rights.

Inheritance

Legal frameworks concerning inheritance rights

While the statutory laws governing inheritance grant women and men equal rights, evidence shows that the informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Do daughters and sons have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Do female and male surviving spouses have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of daughters, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of female surviving spouses, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between sons and daughters when it comes to inheritance?	Yes	!
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between male and female surviving spouses when it comes to inheritance?	Yes	!

Access to land assets

Practices related to women's access to secure land assets

In Côte d'Ivoire, women's land ownership remains a concern. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 25% of women are landowners, compared to 41% of men. This translates in women accounting for 38% of landowners in the country. Across Africa, an average of 43% of men and 26% of women are landowners, with women representing 38% of landowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to land assets

While the statutory laws governing access to land assets grant women and men equal rights, evidence shows that the informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to own land?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to use land?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to own land?	Yes	✓

Access to non-land assets

Practices related to women's secure access to non-land assets

In Côte d'Ivoire, women's access to non-land assets remains limited. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 30% of women own a house, compared to 37% of men. This translates in women accounting for only 43% of homeowners in the country. Across Africa, an average of 45% of men and 29% of women are homeowners, with women representing 40% of homeowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to non-land assets

The legal frameworks governing access to property and non-land assets grant women and men equal rights.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to own property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to use property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to own property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to use property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓

Access to financial services

Practices related to women's access to formal financial services

Gender imbalances in terms of access to financial services remain an issue in Côte d'Ivoire, and the overall access of the population is low. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 14% of women have a bank account at a financial institution, compared to 27% of men. This translates into women accounting for 33% of bank account holders. In comparison, at the global level, 67% of women have a bank account, compared to 72% of men. Across Africa, on average, 28% of women have a bank account, compared to 39% of men, translating into women accounting for 42% of bank account holders.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to financial services

The legal frameworks governing access to financial services grant women and men equal rights.

Question	Answer	Assessment

Workplace rights

Practices and social norms related to women's workplace rights

As per the latest available data in 2023, women account for 57% of employees in a managerial position¹², compared to a world average of 25% and an average of 33% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available. However, only 14% of companies in the country are headed by women.

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Côte d'Ivoire does not have data comparable to other countries on attitudes towards women's abilities and rights. For reference, across Africa, an average of 56% of the population believes that men make better business executives than women and 55% of the population agrees that when jobs are scarce, men should have more right to a job than women.

Legal frameworks concerning women's workplace rights

While the Labour Code¹³ provides for 14 weeks of paid maternity leave and 2 days of paid paternity leave, no paid parental leave is available.
