SIGI Country Profile

6 October 2025

SIGI Country Profiles are produced by the OECD Development Centre. Commended and supported by Italy's G7 presidency, these SIGI Country Profiles for Africa focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment.

The information and analysis contained in this profile are based on data from the fifth edition of the Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI) published in March 2023. The cut-off date for legal data is 31 August 2022; the cut-off date for quantitative data is 1 January 2023.

Foreword

The SIGI 2023 profile for Gabon provides a comprehensive overview of the state of gender equality in the country with a focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment, as measured by the OECD's Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI). The fifth edition of the SIGI, released in 2023, assesses 140 countries based on the level of gender-based discrimination in their social institutions. These discriminatory social institutions encompass both formal and informal laws, as well as social norms and practices that restrict women's and girls' access to rights, justice, empowerment opportunities and resources, thereby undermining their agency and authority.

Specifically, the SIGI measures gender-based discrimination across four dimensions covering the major socio-economic areas that affect women and girls throughout their lifetime:

- The "Discrimination in the family" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's decision-making power and weaken their status in the household and the family.
- The "Restricted physical integrity" dimension captures social institutions that increase women's and girls' vulnerability to multiple forms of violence and limit their control over their reproductive autonomy.
- The "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's economic opportunities and rights.
- The "Restricted civil liberties" dimension captures social institutions restricting women's access to, and participation and voice in, the public and political spheres.

Each dimension builds on four indicators which, in turn, build on one to three variables depending on data availability (Figure 1). When there are no data gaps, each indicator includes one legal variable, one attitudinal variable and one practice variable. Levels of discrimination in the SIGI and its dimensions are assessed based on scores as follow: very low [0-20]; low [20-30]; medium [30-40]; high [40-50]; and very high [50-100].

The state of gender equality in Gabon

Overall, Gabon was among those countries classified as having low levels of gender discrimination based on the SIGI 2023 score (28). For comparison, the average score in the Africa region is 40 while the global average is 29. Across the SIGI's four dimensions, the SIGI score shows lower discrimination in "Restricted physical integrity" (20) and "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" (23) and higher levels of discrimination in "Restricted civil liberties" (27) and "Discrimination in the family" (42).

Positive highlights and significant challenges

Positive highlights

- The statutory legal framework grants women and men the same rights in many SIGI Indicators, including those covering access to assets, freedom of movement and access to justice.
- Gabon has undertaken several legal reforms to promote gender equality, including amendments to the Civil, Labour, and Criminal Codes. A new gender equality strategy was launched setting out ambitious goals to reduce persisting inequalities between 2024 and 2033.

Significant challenges

- Despite the legal advances made, some legal gaps persist, notably with regards to women's employability, child marriage or custody rights of parents in informal unions.
- In certain cases, informal laws risk can undermine women's de jure rights in practice, e.g. with regards to their inheritance or land rights.
- Data on social norms and practices remain scarce, preventing a more comprehensive understanding of women's rights and opportunities in practice. The available data points out persisting inequalities, such as 58% of the population believing it is acceptable for a man to beat his wife under certain circumstances and women's political representation in the parliament only reaching 15% of the seats.

Social and institutional determinants of violence against women and girls

Violence against women is a global pandemic, with disastrous effects on girls' and women's health and well-being. Moreover, violence against women is rarely an isolated incidence, but often part of patterns of abuse sustained by deeply entrenched but harmful social norms and gender stereotypes.¹ As such, it is more than an interpersonal issue - it is a wider societal problem with consequences on countries' development and welfare.

The United Nations define violence against women as wide range of harmful acts that are rooted in unequal power relations between men and women and that result in - or are likely to result in - physical, sexual or mental harm or suffering to women.² At the global level, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women (CEDAW) adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1979 and particularly the General recommendation No. 35 of 2017 recognise the importance of ending gender-based violence against women. In Africa, the Maputo Protocol³ calls on state parties to eliminate all forms of discrimination against women and adopt the needed measures to end and prevent violence against women. The SIGI adopts a life-cycle approach to violence against women and girls covering several types of violence (see Figure 3). This section assesses how social norms and legal frameworks determine girls' and women's risk of being subjected to any of these types of violence.

Violence against women

Practices and social norms related to violence against women

Violence against women remains a concern in Gabon. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 41% of women aged 15-49 have experienced physical and/or sexual violence by a current or former partner at least once during their lifetime, and 21% of women aged more than 15 have experienced such violence at least once over the last 12 months.⁴

These levels of intimate-partner violence are rooted in its widespread social acceptance. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 58% of women aged 15-49 think that it is justified for a husband to hit or beat his wife under certain circumstances, such as burning the food, arguing with the spouse, going out without telling him, neglecting the children, or refusing to have sex. In comparison, 28% of women hold these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 37% across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning violence against women

Law No. 05/2021⁵ amends Article 256 of the Penal Code which defines rape as any act of sexual penetration committed with violence, coercion, threat etc. While the definition covers marital rape it is not grounded on the lack of consent – except for minors under the age of 15 where the absence of consent is always presumed. Finally, Article 257bis of the amended Penal Code defines and prohibits sexual harassment but without referring to the specific places where it can apply. Article 6 of the Labour Code⁶ specifically prohibits sexual harassment in the workplace and Articles 84 and 288 of the Children's Code⁷ condemns sexual harassment of children and provides for more severe penalties when it was committed in a school environment or by a person holding authority over the child. While public places could be covered through the general provision in the Penal Code, a gap persists regarding sexual harassment in online spaces.

Child marriage

Practices related to child marriage

Child marriage remains a concern in Gabon, primarily affecting girls. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 14% of girls aged 15-19 were or are still married, divorced, widowed or in an informal union, compared to 1% of boys. In addition, 22% of women aged 20-24 were married or in a union before the age of 18,⁸ compared to a world average of 26% and an average of 31% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning child marriage

The Civil Code, as amended⁹ sets the minimum legal age of marriage at 18 years for boys and girls. However, as per Article 203 of Law No. 004/2021, the President of the Republic or Supreme Court can grant age exemptions under specific circumstances.

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C)

Practices and social norms related to FGM/C

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) is traditionally concentrated in a limited number of countries that have been well-identified and documented by international organisations at the forefront of the fight against this harmful practice. Yet, evidence highlights that FGM/C takes place across all regions, among indigenous and/or diaspora communities originating from countries where FGM/C is known to be common. In some contexts, girls are taken across national borders to undergo FGM/C in a country where the legislation against the practice is either non-existent or less strict.¹⁰

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Gabon did not have data comparable to that of other countries on the prevalence or attitudes towards FGM/C practices.

Legal frameworks concerning FGM/C

Law No. 38/2008 on FGM/C¹¹ was enacted in 2009 to complement the provisions that could protect girls from FGM/C in Gabon's Penal Code. Articles 3, 10, 11 and 12 of Law No. 38/2008 allow to prosecute FGM/C on narrow grounds, namely under acts of FGM, excision and infibulation.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on broad or narrow grounds?	Yes	✓
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on narrow grounds only?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow or encourage FGM/C?	No	✓
Does the law take precedence over informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow, condone or prescribe FGM?	n.a.	n.a.

¹¹ Republic of Gabon (2009), "Law No. 38/2008 on the prevention and fight against female genital mutilation".

Note: The SIGI methodology assesses laws on FGM/C according to two scenarios: (1) criminalisation on narrow grounds includes laws that contain criminal penalties for acts of “female genital mutilation”, “permanent altering/removal of external genitalia”, “female circumcision”, “excision”, “infibulation” and “genital mutilation”; (2) criminalisation on broad grounds includes “mutilation”, “harming of a person’s organs”, “serious bodily injury” and “bodily injury/hurt/assault.” The presence of informal laws that allow or encourage FGM/C is proxied by the existence of nationally representative data on FGM/C or the existence of indirect estimates (usually used in countries where FGM/C is mainly practiced by diaspora communities), small-scale studies, or anecdotal evidence and media reports as reported by Equality Now, the End FGM European Network and the US End FGM/C Network in 2020.

Social and institutional determinants of women's economic empowerment

Women's economic empowerment is a cornerstone of gender equality and a critical driver of sustainable development. It enables women to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from economic growth, thereby reducing income inequality, boosting productivity, and fostering innovation (UN Women, 2018)¹² (Equality Now, 2020)¹³. As such, advancing women's economic empowerment is essential to realising the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and building resilient, inclusive societies. Beyond structural factors, social and institutional determinants hold an important sway on women's economic empowerment - including their access to resources and economic opportunities. This section offers insights to what extent social norms and legal frameworks support or restrict women's economic empowerment in Gabon, providing detailed information on the following SIGI indicators: Inheritance; Access to land assets; Access to non-land assets; Access to financial services; and Workplace rights.

Inheritance

Legal frameworks concerning inheritance rights

While the statutory laws grant women and men equal inheritance rights, evidence shows that the informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Do daughters and sons have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Do female and male surviving spouses have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of daughters, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of female surviving spouses, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between sons and daughters when it comes to inheritance?	No	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between male and female surviving spouses when it comes to inheritance?	Yes	!

Access to land assets

Practices related to women's access to secure land assets

In Gabon, women's land ownership remains a serious concern. Based on the latest available data in 2023, only 20% of women are landowners, however, no data is available on men's land ownership and thus the share of women amongst landowners. Across Africa, an average of 43% of men and 26% of women are landowners, with women representing 38% of landowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to land assets

While the statutory laws grant women and men equal ownership and usage rights over land assets, evidence shows that informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to own land?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to use land?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to own land?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to use land?	Yes	✓
Regarding land, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, religious or traditional laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between men and women when it comes to the ownership or use of land assets?	Yes	!

Access to non-land assets

Practices related to women's secure access to non-land assets

In Gabon, women's access to non-land assets remains limited. Based on the latest available data in 2023, only 23% of women own a house, however no data is available on men's house ownership and thus the share of women amongst house owners. Across Africa, an average of 45% of men and 29% of women are homeowners, with women representing 40% of homeowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to non-land assets

While the statutory laws grant women and men equal ownership and usage rights over non-land assets, evidence shows that informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to own property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to use property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to own property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to use property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓

Access to financial services

Practices related to women's access to formal financial services

Gender imbalances in terms of access to financial services remain an issue in Gabon, and the overall access of the population is low. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 21% of women have a bank account at a financial institution, compared to 35% of men. This translates into women accounting for 35% of bank account holders. In comparison, at the global level, 67% of women have a bank account, compared to 72% of men. Across Africa, on average, 28% of women have a bank account, compared to 39% of men, translating into women accounting for 42% of bank account holders.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to financial services

The legal frameworks governing access to financial services grant women and men equal rights.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide women with the same rights as men to open a bank account at a formal financial institution?	Yes	✓
Does the law require married women to obtain the signature and authority of their husband to open a bank account at a formal financial institution?	No	✓
Does the law provide women with the same rights as men to obtain credit?	Yes	✓
Regarding access to formal financial services, does the law apply to all groups of women (regardless of race, ethnicity, caste, etc.)?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, religious, or traditional laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between men and women when it comes to opening a bank account?	No	✓

Workplace rights

Practices and social norms related to women's workplace rights

In Gabon, as per the latest available data in 2023, only 12% of companies in the country are headed by women. However, no data is available on women's representation in other decision-making roles, such as managers.

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Gabon does not have data comparable to other countries on attitudes towards women's abilities and rights. For reference, across Africa, an average of 56% of the population believes that men make better business executives than women and 55% of the population agrees that when jobs are scarce, men should have more right to a job than women.

Legal frameworks concerning women's workplace rights

While the Labour Code¹⁴ provides for 14 weeks of paid maternity leave and 3 days of paid paternity leave, no paid parental leave is available.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law prohibit discrimination in employment on the basis of sex?	Yes	✓
Does the law mandate equal remuneration for work of equal value?	Yes	✓
Does the law prohibit women from entering certain professions?	No	✓
Does the law allow women to work the same night hours as men?	Yes	✓
