Equatorial Guinea

SIGI Country Profile

6 October 2025

SIGI Country Profiles are produced by the OECD Development Centre. Commended and supported by Italy's G7 presidency, these SIGI Country Profiles for Africa focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment.

The information and analysis contained in this profile are based on data from the fifth edition of the Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI) published in March 2023. The cut-off date for legal data is 31 August 2022; the cut-off date for quantitative data is 1 January 2023.

Foreword

The SIGI 2023 profile for Equatorial Guinea provides a comprehensive overview of the state of gender equality in the country with a focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment, as measured by the OECD's Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI). The fifth edition of the SIGI, released in 2023, assesses 140 countries based on the level of gender-based discrimination in their social institutions. These discriminatory social institutions encompass both formal and informal laws, as well as social norms and practices that restrict women's and girls' access to rights, justice, empowerment opportunities and resources, thereby undermining their agency and authority.

Specifically, the SIGI measures gender-based discrimination across four dimensions covering the major socio-economic areas that affect women and girls throughout their lifetime:

- The "Discrimination in the family" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's decision-making power and weaken their status in the household and the family.
- The "Restricted physical integrity" dimension captures social institutions that increase women's and girls' vulnerability to multiple forms of violence and limit their control over their reproductive autonomy.
- The "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's economic opportunities and rights.
- The "Restricted civil liberties" dimension captures social institutions restricting women's access to, and participation and voice in, the public and political spheres.

Each dimension builds on four indicators which, in turn, build on one to three variables depending on data availability (Figure 1). When there are no data gaps, each indicator includes one legal variable, one attitudinal variable and one practice variable. Levels of discrimination in the SIGI and its dimensions are assessed based on scores as follow: very low [0-20]; low [20-30]; medium [30-40]; high [40-50]; and very high [50-100].

The state of gender equality in Equatorial Guinea

For the fifth edition of the SIGI, published in 2023, no SIGI score could be computed for Equatorial-Guinea given missing data points on women's and men's land ownership and the share of women among landowners, women's and men's home ownership and the share of women among homeowners, and women's and men's bank account ownership and the share of women among bank account holders. Equatorial-Guinea also faced missing data on women's and men's feelings of insecurity and levels of confidence in the judicial system. Nonetheless, based on available data, SIGI scores could be calculated for two out of the four dimensions. For reference, the average SIGI score in the Africa region is 40 while the global average is 29.

Positive highlights and significant challenges

Positive highlights

- The statutory legal framework grants women and men the same rights in many SIGI Indicators, including those covering access to financial assets, citizenship rights, freedom of movement, and access to justice.
- Equatorial Guinea has implemented key measures to advance gender equality, including the National Strategic Multi-sectoral Action Plan on Gender (2020–2024) and Law 4/2020 on Sexual and Reproductive Rights, which broadened legal grounds for abortion while retaining the requirement for spousal consent.

Significant challenges

- The absence of gender-disaggregated data on social norms and economic outcomes prevents a comprehensive understanding of women's rights and opportunities in practice and has left Cabo Verde without a SIGI score.
- Inadequate legal protection from gender-based violence, coupled with widespread social acceptance of wife-beating (57%), has resulted in high prevalence rates of intimate partner violence—46% over a lifetime and 25.6% in the past year.
- The legal framework provides insufficient protection against child marriage, with 22% of girls and 4.6% of boys married before age 18, both above regional averages.

³ A natural boy-to-girl sex ratio at birth is generally estimated to be below 105. A ratio exceeding 105 implies the existence of more boys aged 0-4 than one would expect, indicating a potential phenomenon of son preference resulting in the systemic elimination of new-born girls.

⁴ % of married or in-union women of reproductive age who want to either stop or delay childbearing but are not using any contraception method.

Social and institutional determinants of violence against women and girls

Violence against women is a global pandemic, with disastrous effects on girls' and women's health and well-being. Moreover, violence against women is rarely an isolated incidence, but often part of patterns of abuse sustained by deeply entrenched but harmful social norms and gender stereotypes.¹ As such, it is more than an interpersonal issue - it is a wider societal problem with consequences on countries' development and welfare.

The United Nations define violence against women as wide range of harmful acts that are rooted in unequal power relations between men and women and that result in - or are likely to result in - physical, sexual or mental harm or suffering to women.² At the global level, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women (CEDAW) adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1979 and particularly the General recommendation No. 35 of 2017 recognise the importance of ending gender-based violence against women. In Africa, the Maputo Protocol³ calls on state parties to eliminate all forms of discrimination against women and adopt the needed measures to end and prevent violence against women. The SIGI adopts a life-cycle approach to violence against women and girls covering several types of violence (see Figure 3). This section assesses how social norms and legal frameworks determine girls' and women's risk of being subjected to any of these types of violence.

Violence against women

Practices and social norms related to violence against women

Violence against women remains a major concern in Equatorial Guinea. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 46% of women aged 15-49 have experienced physical and/or sexual violence by a current or former partner at least once during their lifetime, and 26% of women aged more than 15 have experienced such violence at least once over the last 12 months.⁴

These levels of intimate-partner violence are rooted in its social acceptance. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 57% of women aged 15-49 think that it is justified for a husband to hit or beat his wife under certain circumstances, such as burning the food, arguing with the spouse, going out without telling him, neglecting the children, or refusing to have sex. In comparison, 28% of women hold these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 37% across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning violence against women

Equatorial Guinea does not have a dedicated law addressing all forms of violence against women. Domestic violence is not criminalised in Equatorial Guinea and while Article 296 of the Penal Code⁵ sets forth the penalties in case of rape, it does not cover marital rape. Moreover, the definition of rape is not grounded on the lack of consent and Article 443 of the Penal Code permits the removal of legal punishment through when the perpetrator marries the victim/survivor.

Child marriage

Practices related to child marriage

Child marriage remains limited in Equatorial Guinea. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 22% of girls aged 15-19 were or are still married, divorced, widowed or in an informal union, compared to 5% of boys. In addition, 30% of women aged 20-24 were married or in a union before the age of 18,⁶ compared to a world average of 26% and an average of 31% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning child marriage

Article 48 of the Civil Code⁷ allows the Judge of First Instance to authorise marriage from the age of fourteen for just cause, following a hearing with the minor and their parents or guardians.

Question	Answer	Assessment
What is the legal age of marriage for men?	18	✓
What is the legal age of marriage for women?	18	✓

⁶ This indicator corresponds to SDG indicator 5.3.1

⁷ Republic of Equatorial Guinea (1883), "Civil Code".

Question	Answer	Assessment
Are there legal exceptions to the legal age of marriage that allow women and men under the legal age of marriage to marry with the consent of parent and/or legal guardian?	No	✓
Are there legal exceptions to the legal age of marriage that allow women and men under the legal age of marriage to marry with the consent of judge or court?	Yes	!

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C)

Practices and social norms related to FGM/C

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) is traditionally concentrated in a limited number of countries that have been well-identified and documented by international organisations at the forefront of the fight against this harmful practice. Yet, evidence highlights that FGM/C takes place across all regions, among indigenous and/or diaspora communities originating from countries where FGM/C is known to be common. In some contexts, girls are taken across national borders to undergo FGM/C in a country where the legislation against the practice is either non-existent or less strict.⁸

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Equatorial Guinea did not have data comparable to that of other countries on the prevalence or attitudes towards FGM/C practices.

Legal frameworks concerning FGM/C

Article 419 of the Penal Code⁹ allows for the prosecution of FGM/C acts on broad grounds, namely under acts of mutilation of an organ or principal limb. However, the law does not criminalise FGM/C on narrow ground

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on broad or narrow grounds?	Yes	✓
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on narrow grounds only?	No	!
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow or encourage FGM/C?	No	✓
Does the law take precedence over informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow, condone or prescribe FGM?	n.a.	n.a.

Note: The SIGI methodology assesses laws on FGM/C according to two scenarios: (1) criminalisation on narrow grounds includes laws that contain criminal penalties for acts of “female genital mutilation”, “permanent altering/removal of external genitalia”, “female circumcision”, “excision”, “infibulation” and “genital mutilation”; (2) criminalisation on broad grounds includes “mutilation”, “harming of a person’s organs”, “serious bodily injury” and “bodily injury/hurt/assault.” The presence of informal laws that allow or encourage FGM/C is proxied by the existence of nationally representative data on FGM/C or the existence of indirect estimates (usually used in countries where FGM/C is mainly practiced by diaspora communities), small-scale studies, or anecdotal evidence and media reports as reported by Equality Now, the End FGM European Network and the US End FGM/C Network in 2020.

Social and institutional determinants of women's economic empowerment

Women's economic empowerment is a cornerstone of gender equality and a critical driver of sustainable development. It enables women to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from economic growth, thereby reducing income inequality, boosting productivity, and fostering innovation (UN Women, 2018)¹⁰ (Equality Now, 2020)¹¹. As such, advancing women's economic empowerment is essential to realising the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and building resilient, inclusive societies. Beyond structural factors, social and institutional determinants hold an important sway on women's economic empowerment - including their access to resources and economic opportunities. This section offers insights to what extent social norms and legal frameworks support or restrict women's economic empowerment in Equatorial Guinea, providing detailed information on the following SIGI indicators: Inheritance; Access to land assets; Access to non-land assets; Access to financial services; and Workplace rights.

Inheritance

Legal frameworks concerning inheritance rights

While the statutory laws governing inheritance grant women and men equal rights, evidence shows that in some cases the informal laws to which certain parts of the population adhere to are gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Do daughters and sons have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Do female and male surviving spouses have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of daughters, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of female surviving spouses, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between sons and daughters when it comes to inheritance?	Yes	!
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between male and female surviving spouses when it comes to inheritance?	Yes	!

Access to land assets

Practices related to women's access to secure land assets

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Equatorial Guinea did not have data comparable to that of other countries on women's and men's access to land assets. For reference, an average of 43% of men and 26% of women are landowners across Africa, with women representing 38% of landowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to land assets

Articles 59 and 1412 of the Civil Code¹² designate the husband as the administrator of conjugal and community property, so married women do not enjoy the same rights as married men to own and administer land.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to own land?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to use land?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to own land?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to use land?	Yes	✓
Regarding land, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, religious or traditional laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between men and women when it comes to the ownership or use of land assets?	Yes	!

Access to non-land assets

Practices related to women's secure access to non-land assets

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Equatorial Guinea did not have data comparable to that of other countries on women's and men's access to non-land assets. For reference, an average of 45% of men and 29% of women are homeowners across Africa, with women representing 40% of homeowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to non-land assets

While the legal frameworks governing access to non-land assets grant women and men equal rights, evidence shows that in some cases the informal laws to which certain parts of the population adhere to are gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to own property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to use property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to own property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓

Access to financial services

Practices related to women's access to formal financial services

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Equatorial Guinea does not have gender-disaggregated data comparable to other countries on access to financial services. For reference, an average of 28% of women and 39% of men have a bank account across Africa, translating into women accounting for 42% of bank account holders.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to financial services

The legal frameworks governing access to financial services grant women and men equal rights.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide women with the same rights as men to open a bank account at a formal financial institution?	Yes	✓
Does the law require married women to obtain the signature and authority of their husband to open a bank account at a formal financial institution?	No	✓
Does the law provide women with the same rights as men to obtain credit?	Yes	✓
Regarding access to formal financial services, does the law apply to all groups of women (regardless of race, ethnicity caste, etc.)?	Yes	✓

Workplace rights

Practices and social norms related to women's workplace rights

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Equatorial Guinea does not have data comparable to other countries on the proportion of women among managers or the share of companies in the country headed by women. For reference, as per the latest available data in 2023, an average of 33% of women account for employees in a managerial position across Africa.

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Equatorial Guinea did not have data comparable to that of other countries on the prevalence or attitudes towards FGM/C practices.

Legal frameworks concerning women's workplace rights

Article 81 of the General Labour Law¹³ provides for 12 weeks of paid maternity leave for women but does not include any provisions for paid paternity or parental leave.
