Liberia

SIGI Country Profile

6 October 2025

SIGI Country Profiles are produced by the OECD Development Centre. Commended and supported by Italy's G7 presidency, these SIGI Country Profiles for Africa focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment.

The information and analysis contained in this profile are based on data from the fifth edition of the Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI) published in March 2023. The cut-off date for legal data is 31 August 2022; the cut-off date for quantitative data is 1 January 2023.

Foreword

The SIGI 2023 profile for Liberia provides a comprehensive overview of the state of gender equality in the country with a focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment, as measured by the OECD's Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI). The fifth edition of the SIGI, released in 2023, assesses 140 countries based on the level of gender-based discrimination in their social institutions. These discriminatory social institutions encompass both formal and informal laws, as well as social norms and practices that restrict women's and girls' access to rights, justice, empowerment opportunities and resources, thereby undermining their agency and authority.

Specifically, the SIGI measures gender-based discrimination across four dimensions covering the major socio-economic areas that affect women and girls throughout their lifetime:

- The "Discrimination in the family" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's decision-making power and weaken their status in the household and the family.
- The "Restricted physical integrity" dimension captures social institutions that increase women's and girls' vulnerability to multiple forms of violence and limit their control over their reproductive autonomy.
- The "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's economic opportunities and rights.
- The "Restricted civil liberties" dimension captures social institutions restricting women's access to, and participation and voice in, the public and political spheres.

Each dimension builds on four indicators which, in turn, build on one to three variables depending on data availability (Figure 1). When there are no data gaps, each indicator includes one legal variable, one attitudinal variable and one practice variable. Levels of discrimination in the SIGI and its dimensions are assessed based on scores as follow: very low [0-20]; low [20-30]; medium [30-40]; high [40-50]; and very high [50-100].

The state of gender equality in Liberia

Overall, Liberia was among those countries classified as having medium levels of gender discrimination based on the SIGI 2023 score (38). For comparison, the average score in the Africa region is 40 while the global average is 29. Across the SIGI's four dimensions, the SIGI score shows lower discrimination in "Restricted civil liberties" (18) and "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" (28) and higher levels of discrimination in "Restricted physical integrity" (43) and "Discrimination in the family" (60).

Positive highlights and significant challenges

Positive highlights

- The statutory legal framework grants women and men the same rights in many SIGI Indicators, including those covering access to non-land assets, citizenship rights, freedom of movement and access to justice.
- Women's participation in economic leadership is relatively strong. The share of women among managers (41%) and the share of firms with a woman as top manager (20%) exceed regional averages (33% and 14%, respectively).
- In 2022, the government launched the Liberia Women Empowerment Project (LWEP), a comprehensive initiative running through 2027 to reduce gender inequalities by addressing discriminatory social norms, improving access to health and education, promoting economic inclusion, and strengthening institutional capacity for gender-responsive governance.

Significant challenges

- Women's rights and opportunities are particularly restricted within the family sphere through discriminatory legal frameworks, social norms and the persisting practice of girl child marriage.
- Women's physical integrity is undermined by legal gaps and entrenched social norms. Protection against FGM/C remains weak and a significant share of women support its continuation. Intimate-partner violence is widespread, and social acceptance of wife-beating remains high.
- Data on gender roles and responsibilities remain scarce, preventing a more comprehensive understanding of women's rights and opportunities in practice. The available data point towards persisting inequalities within the family to the political sphere where women occupy only 11% of parliament seats.

Social and institutional determinants of violence against women and girls

Violence against women is a global pandemic, with disastrous effects on girls' and women's health and well-being. Moreover, violence against women is rarely an isolated incidence, but often part of patterns of abuse sustained by deeply entrenched but harmful social norms and gender stereotypes.¹ As such, it is more than an interpersonal issue - it is a wider societal problem with consequences on countries' development and welfare.

The United Nations define violence against women as wide range of harmful acts that are rooted in unequal power relations between men and women and that result in - or are likely to result in - physical, sexual or mental harm or suffering to women.² At the global level, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women (CEDAW) adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1979 and particularly the General recommendation No. 35 of 2017 recognise the importance of ending gender-based violence against women. In Africa, the Maputo Protocol³ calls on state parties to eliminate all forms of discrimination against women and adopt the needed measures to end and prevent violence against women. The SIGI adopts a life-cycle approach to violence against women and girls covering several types of violence (see Figure 3). This section assesses how social norms and legal frameworks determine girls' and women's risk of being subjected to any of these types of violence.

Violence against women

Practices and social norms related to violence against women

Violence against women remains a major concern in Liberia. Based on the latest data available. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 43% of women aged 15-49 have experienced physical and/or sexual violence by a current or former partner at least once during their lifetime, and 23% of women aged more than 15 have experienced such violence at least once over the last 12 months.⁴

These levels of intimate-partner violence are rooted in its widespread social acceptance. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 45% of women aged 15-49 think that it is justified for a husband to hit or beat his wife under certain circumstances, such as burning the food, arguing with the spouse, going out without telling him, neglecting the children, or refusing to have sex. In comparison, 28% of women hold these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 37% across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning violence against women

Liberia does not have a dedicated law addressing all forms of violence against women. Section 14.70 of the Penal Law⁵ on the prevention and punishment of violence against women includes non-consensual sexual penetration as a form of violence. Section 14.70 of the Penal Law defines rape as any act of sexual penetration, regardless its nature, committed against another person through violence, coercion, threat, or surprise. As per this definition of rape, proof of penetration could be required. Finally, Section 1.4 and 2.8

Child marriage

Practices related to child marriage

Child marriage remains a major concern in Liberia, primarily affecting girls. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 12% of girls aged 15-19 were or are still married, divorced, widowed or in an informal union, compared to 1% of boys. In addition, 25% of women aged 20-24 were married or in a union before the age of 18,⁷ compared to a world average of 26% and an average of 31% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning child marriage

Section 2 (2.1–2) of the Domestic Relations Law⁸ sets the minimum legal age of marriage at 21 years for men and 18 years for women. Marriage under the age of 16 is strictly prohibited. However, individuals

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C)

Practices and social norms related to FGM/C

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) is traditionally concentrated in a limited number of countries that have been well-identified and documented by international organisations at the forefront of the fight against this harmful practice. Yet, evidence highlights that FGM/C takes place across all regions, among indigenous and/or diaspora communities originating from countries where FGM/C is known to be common. In some contexts, girls are taken across national borders to undergo FGM/C in a country where the legislation against the practice is either non-existent or less strict.⁹

Based on the latest available data in 2023, female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) remains present in Liberia, with 32% of women aged 15-49 who have undergone the practice. Moreover, 36% of women think that the practice of FGM/C should continue.

Legal frameworks concerning FGM/C

Section 242 of the Penal Code¹⁰ allows for the prosecution of FGM/C acts on broad grounds, namely under malicious and unlawful bodily injury involving the removal or deprivation of a body part. However, the law does not criminalise FGM/C on narrow grounds. Executive Order No. 92¹¹ temporarily banned the practice on girls under age 18 for one year in 2018. In 2022, the Traditional Council of Liberia declared a three-year moratorium on the practice of FGM/C, though this suspension is not legally binding and has not been codified in national legislation.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on broad or narrow grounds?	Yes	✓
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on narrow grounds only?	No	!
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow or encourage FGM/C?	Yes	!
Does the law take precedence over informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow, condone or prescribe FGM?	No	!

¹¹ Republic of Liberia (2018), "Executive Order No. 92 on Domestic Violence".

Note: The SIGI methodology assesses laws on FGM/C according to two scenarios: (1) criminalisation on narrow grounds includes laws that contain criminal penalties for acts of “female genital mutilation”, “permanent altering/removal of external genitalia”, “female circumcision”, “excision”, “infibulation” and “genital mutilation”; (2) criminalisation on broad grounds includes “mutilation”, “harming of a person’s organs”, “serious bodily injury” and “bodily injury/hurt/assault.” The presence of informal laws that allow or encourage FGM/C is proxied by the existence of nationally representative data on FGM/C or the existence of indirect estimates (usually used in countries where FGM/C is mainly practiced by diaspora communities), small-scale studies, or anecdotal evidence and media reports as reported by Equality Now, the End FGM European Network and the US End FGM/C Network in 2020.

Social and institutional determinants of women's economic empowerment

Women's economic empowerment is a cornerstone of gender equality and a critical driver of sustainable development. It enables women to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from economic growth, thereby reducing income inequality, boosting productivity, and fostering innovation (UN Women, 2018)¹² (Equality Now, 2020)¹³. As such, advancing women's economic empowerment is essential to realising the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and building resilient, inclusive societies. Beyond structural factors, social and institutional determinants hold an important sway on women's economic empowerment - including their access to resources and economic opportunities. This section offers insights to what extent social norms and legal frameworks support or restrict women's economic empowerment in Liberia, providing detailed information on the following SIGI indicators: Inheritance; Access to land assets; Access to non-land assets; Access to financial services; and Workplace rights.

Inheritance

Legal frameworks concerning inheritance rights

In Liberia, statutory law coexists with customary law, which continues to govern matters of marriage and inheritance for many communities. Under customary law, widows face significant limitations in accessing property rights. Section 3.2 of the Equal Rights of Customary Marriage Law¹⁴ stipulates that a widow or multiple widows are collectively entitled to only one-third of the deceased husband's estate, while the remaining two-thirds must pass to the children or, in their absence, to collateral heirs according to the Decedents Estates Law.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Do daughters and sons have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Do female and male surviving spouses have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of daughters, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of female surviving spouses, does the law apply to all groups of women?	No	!

Access to land assets

Practices related to women's access to secure land assets

In Liberia, women's land ownership remains a serious concern. Based on the latest available data in 2023, only 14% of women are landowners, compared to 31% of men. This translates in women accounting for 31% of landowners in the country.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to land assets

While the statutory laws grant women and men equal ownership and usage rights over land assets, evidence shows that the informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory. Across Africa, an average of 43% of men and 26% of women are landowners, with women representing 38% of landowners in the region.

Access to non-land assets

Practices related to women's secure access to non-land assets

In Liberia, women's access to non-land assets remains limited. Based on the latest available data in 2023, only 24% of women own a house, compared to 35% of men. This translates in women accounting for only 41% of house owners in the country. Across Africa, an average of 45% of men and 29% of women are homeowners, with women representing 40% of homeowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to non-land assets

The statutory laws grant women and men equal ownership and usage rights over non-land assets.

Access to financial services

Practices related to women's access to formal financial services

Gender imbalances in terms of access to financial services remain an issue in Liberia, and the overall access of the population is low. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 19% of women have a bank account at a financial institution, compared to 38% of men. This translates into women accounting for 34% of bank account holders. In comparison, at the global level, 67% of women have a bank account, compared to 72% of men. Across Africa, on average, 28% of women have a bank account, compared to 39% of men, translating into women accounting for 42% of bank account holders.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to financial services

While the statutory laws grant women and men equal ownership and usage rights over financial services, evidence shows that the informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide women with the same rights as men to open a bank account at a formal financial institution?	Yes	✓
Does the law require married women to obtain the signature and authority of their husband to open a bank account at a formal financial institution?	No	✓
Does the law provide women with the same rights as men to obtain credit?	Yes	✓
Regarding access to formal financial services, does the law apply to all groups of women (regardless of race, ethnicity caste, etc.)?	Yes	✓

Workplace rights

Practices and social norms related to women's workplace rights

Women's access to positions with decision-making power in the economic sphere is relatively good. As of the latest available data in 2023, women account for 41% of employees in a managerial position,¹⁵ compared to a world average of 25% and an average of 33% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available. However, only 20% of companies in the country are headed by women.

¹⁵ This indicator corresponds to SDG indicator 5.2.2

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Liberia does not have data comparable to other countries on attitudes towards women's abilities and rights. For reference, across Africa, an average of 56% of the population believes that men make better business executives than women and 55% of the population agrees that when jobs are scarce, men should have more right to a job than women.

Legal frameworks concerning women's workplace rights

While Section 20.1 and 20.3 of the Decent Work Act¹⁶ provide for 14 weeks of paid maternity leave and 5 days of unpaid paternity leave, no paid parental leave is available.
