SIGI Country Profile

6 October 2025

SIGI Country Profiles are produced by the OECD Development Centre. Commended and supported by Italy's G7 presidency, these SIGI Country Profiles for Africa focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment.

The information and analysis contained in this profile are based on data from the fifth edition of the Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI) published in March 2023. The cut-off date for legal data is 31 August 2022; the cut-off date for quantitative data is 1 January 2023.

Foreword

The SIGI 2023 profile for Morocco provides a comprehensive overview of the state of gender equality in the country with a focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment, as measured by the OECD's Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI). The fifth edition of the SIGI, released in 2023, assesses 140 countries based on the level of gender-based discrimination in their social institutions. These discriminatory social institutions encompass both formal and informal laws, as well as social norms and practices that restrict women's and girls' access to rights, justice, empowerment opportunities and resources, thereby undermining their agency and authority.

Specifically, the SIGI measures gender-based discrimination across four dimensions covering the major socio-economic areas that affect women and girls throughout their lifetime:

- The "Discrimination in the family" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's decision-making power and weaken their status in the household and the family.
- The "Restricted physical integrity" dimension captures social institutions that increase women's and girls' vulnerability to multiple forms of violence and limit their control over their reproductive autonomy.
- The "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's economic opportunities and rights.
- The "Restricted civil liberties" dimension captures social institutions restricting women's access to, and participation and voice in, the public and political spheres.

Each dimension builds on four indicators which, in turn, build on one to three variables depending on data availability (Figure 1). When there are no data gaps, each indicator includes one legal variable, one attitudinal variable and one practice variable. Levels of discrimination in the SIGI and its dimensions are assessed based on scores as follow: very low [0-20]; low [20-30]; medium [30-40]; high [40-50]; and very high [50-100].

The state of gender equality in Morocco

Overall, Morocco was among those countries classified as having high levels of gender discrimination based on the SIGI 2023 score (49). For comparison, the average score in the Africa region is 40 while the global average is 29. Across the SIGI's four dimensions, the SIGI score shows lower discrimination in "Restricted physical integrity" (33) and "Restricted civil liberties" (33) and higher levels of discrimination in "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" (43) and "Discrimination in the family" (80).

Positive highlights and significant challenges

Positive highlights

- In 2024, Morocco introduced a proposal to reform the Moudawana, the country's Family Code. This proposal includes a series of amendments aimed to strengthen women's rights.
- Since 2011, legislated quotas and mechanisms of alternating the sexes on party lists are in place to promote women's political participation at the national and local levels.
- The statutory legal frameworks governing several SIGI indicators such as civil rights, access to assets and financial services, and access to justice are gender equal.

Significant challenges

- The Family Code contains discriminatory provisions that restrict women's rights to be legal guardians of their children, to file for divorce, and to inherit on equal grounds as men.
- Gender-disaggregated data on ownership of land and non-land assets remains limited, preventing a more comprehensive understanding of how gender roles influence women's rights and opportunities.
- The Moroccan statutory laws do not comprehensively protect women from all forms of violence.
   For instance, marital rape is not criminalised, and the law allows for penalty reductions in case of "honour crimes."

Social and institutional determinants of violence against women and girls

Violence against women is a global pandemic, with disastrous effects on girls' and women's health and well-being. Moreover, violence against women is rarely an isolated incidence, but often part of patterns of abuse sustained by deeply entrenched but harmful social norms and gender stereotypes. As such, it is more than an interpersonal issue - it is a wider societal problem with consequences on countries' development and welfare.

The United Nations define violence against women as wide range of harmful acts that are rooted in unequal power relations between men and women and that result in - or are likely to result in - physical, sexual or mental harm or suffering to women.<sup>2</sup> At the global level, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women (CEDAW) adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1979 and particularly the General recommendation No. 35 of 2017 recognise the importance of ending gender-based violence against women. In Africa, the Maputo Protocol<sup>3</sup> calls on state parties to eliminate all forms of discrimination against women and adopt the needed measures to end and prevent violence against women. The SIGI adopts a life-cycle approach to violence against women and girls covering several types of violence (see Figure 3). This section assesses how social norms and legal frameworks determine girls' and women's risk of being subjected to any of these types of violence.

Violence against women

Practices and social norms related to violence against women

Violence against women remains a major concern in Morocco. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 46% of women aged 15-49 have experienced physical and/or sexual violence by a current or former partner at least once during their lifetime, and 14% of women aged more than 15 have experienced such violence at least once over the last 12 months.<sup>4</sup>

These levels of intimate-partner violence are rooted in its widespread social acceptance. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 52% of women aged 15-49 think that it is justified for a husband to hit or beat his wife under certain circumstances, such as burning the food, arguing with the spouse, going out without telling him, neglecting the children, or refusing to have sex. In comparison, 28% of women hold these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 37% across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning violence against women

Article 418 of the Penal Code,<sup>5</sup> as amended, provides for reduced penalties in cases of so-called "honour crimes." Murder and injuries are excusable when committed by one of the spouses on the other spouse and/or the person with whom they are committing adultery. Although Article 486 criminalises rape and grounds its definition in the notion of consent, it does not explicitly cover marital rape.

Child marriage

Practices related to child marriage

Child marriage remains a concern in Morocco, primarily affecting girls. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 9% of girls aged 15-19 were or are still married, divorced, widowed or in an informal union, compared to 0% of boys. In addition, 14% of women aged 20-24 were married or in a union before the age of 18,6 compared to a world average of 26% and an average of 31% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning child marriage

Article 20 of the Family Code,<sup>7</sup> the so-called Moudawana, provides that a family affairs judge may permit the marriage of girls and boys aged below 18 years when well justified and only after inquiring the parents' or legal guardian's opinion or after conducting a social enquiry. Article 21 further specifies that the marriage

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C)

Practices and social norms related to FGM/C

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) is traditionally concentrated in a limited number of countries that have been well-identified and documented by international organisations at the forefront of the fight against this harmful practice. Yet, evidence highlights that FGM/C takes place across all regions, among indigenous and/or diaspora communities originating from countries where FGM/C is known to be common. In some contexts, girls are taken across national borders to undergo FGM/C in a country where the legislation against the practice is either non-existent or less strict.<sup>8</sup>

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Morocco did not have data comparable to that of other countries on the prevalence or attitudes towards FGM/C practices.

Legal frameworks concerning FGM/C

Article 402 of the Penal Code,<sup>9</sup> as amended, allows to prosecute FGM/C acts on broad grounds, namely under acts of mutilation. However, the law does not criminalise FGM/C on narrow grounds.

Note: The SIGI methodology assesses laws on FGM/C according to two scenarios: (1) criminalisation on narrow grounds includes laws that contain criminal penalties for acts of "female genital mutilation", "permanent altering/removal of external genitalia", "female circumcision", "excision", "infibulation" and "genital mutilation"; (2) criminalisation on broad grounds includes "mutilation", "harming of a person's organs", "serious bodily injury" and "bodily injury/hurt/assault." The presence of informal laws that allow or encourage FGM/C is proxied by the existence of nationally representative data on FGM/C or the existence of indirect estimates (usually used in countries where FGM/C is mainly practiced by diaspora communities), small-scale studies, or anecdotal evidence and media reports as reported by Equality Now, the End FGM European Network and the US End FGM/C Network in 2020.

Social and institutional determinants of women's economic empowerment

Women's economic empowerment is a cornerstone of gender equality and a critical driver of sustainable development. It enables women to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from economic growth, thereby reducing income inequality, boosting productivity, and fostering innovation (UN Women, 2018)<sup>10</sup> (Equality Now, 2020)<sup>11</sup>. As such, advancing women's economic empowerment is essential to realising the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and building resilient, inclusive societies. Beyond structural factors, social and institutional determinants hold an important sway on women's economic empowerment including their access to resources and economic opportunities. This section offers insights to what extent social norms and legal frameworks support or restrict women's economic empowerment in Morocco, providing detailed information on the following SIGI indicators: Inheritance; Access to land assets; Access to non-land assets; Access to financial services; and Workplace rights.

Inheritance

Legal frameworks concerning inheritance rights

Provisions of the Family Code, <sup>12</sup> (Book IV) governing inheritance matters follow the principles of Islamic Sharia, whereby female heirs are entitled to half of the inheritance share of male heirs. This means, for instance, that sons are entitled to twice the share received by daughters. Articles 342-344 stipulate that a surviving widower receives one half of the estate (or one quarter if there are surviving children), whereas a surviving widow receives one quarter of the estate (or one eighth if there are surviving children). Finally, the Family Code does not apply to all citizens: Article 2 stipulates that Moroccan Jews are subject to the provisions of the Hebraic Moroccan Family Law. In addition, Article 332 of the Family Code prohibits inheritance between Muslims and non-Muslims.

Access to land assets

Practices related to women's access to secure land assets

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Morocco did not have data comparable to that of other countries on women's and men's access to land assets. For reference, an average of 43% of men and 26% of women are landowners across Africa, with women representing 38% of landowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to land assets

While the statutory laws governing ownership and use of land assets grant women and men equal rights, evidence shows that informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Access to non-land assets

Practices related to women's secure access to non-land assets

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Morocco did not have data comparable to that of other countries on women's and men's access to non-land assets. For reference, an average of 45% of men and 29% of women are homeowners across Africa, with women representing 40% of homeowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to non-land assets

While the statutory laws governing ownership and use of non-land assets grant women and men equal rights, evidence shows that informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Access to financial services

Practices related to women's access to formal financial services

Gender imbalances in terms of access to financial services remain an issue in Morocco, and the overall access of the population is low. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 31% of women have a bank account at a financial institution, compared to 53% of men. This translates in women accounting for 37% of bank account holders. In comparison, at the global level, 67% of women have a bank account, compared to 72% of men. Across Africa, on average, 28% of women have a bank account, compared to 39% of men, translating into women accounting for 42% of bank account holders.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to financial services

The statutory laws governing access to financial services and assets grant women and men equal rights.

Question	Answer	Assessment

Workplace rights

Practices and social norms related to women's workplace rights

Women remain largely excluded from positions with decision-making power in the economic sphere. As of the latest available data in 2023, women only account for 13% of employees in a managerial position, <sup>13</sup> compared to a world average of 25% and an average of 33% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available. Only 5% of companies in the country are headed by women.

These gender gaps are upheld by discriminatory social norms that establish men as the main breadwinners and more fit to hold leadership positions. In Morocco, 39% of the population believes that men make better business executives than women, compared to a world average of 42% and an average of 56% in Africa. Likewise, 56% of the population agrees that when jobs are scarce, men should have more right to a job than women. In comparison, 45% of the population holds these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 55% of the people across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning women's workplace rights

Article 179 of the Labour Code of 2003,<sup>14</sup> as amended, prohibits women from carrying out underground work in mines. Article 182 stipulates that women may not be employed to perform hazardous or arduous work, or work that is likely to offend public decency – with the list of these professions being set by regulation. Moreover, while Article 152 of the introduces a 14-week maternity leave period and Article 269 establishes a 3-day paternity leave period, there are no legal provisions that grant paid parental leave.
