SIGI Country Profile

6 October 2025

SIGI Country Profiles are produced by the OECD Development Centre. Commended and supported by Italy's G7 presidency, these SIGI Country Profiles for Africa focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment.

The information and analysis contained in this profile are based on data from the fifth edition of the Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI) published in March 2023. The cut-off date for legal data is 31 August 2022; the cut-off date for quantitative data is 1 January 2023.

Foreword

The SIGI 2023 profile for Niger provides a comprehensive overview of the state of gender equality in the country with a focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment, as measured by the OECD's Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI). The fifth edition of the SIGI, released in 2023, assesses 140 countries based on the level of gender-based discrimination in their social institutions. These discriminatory social institutions encompass both formal and informal laws, as well as social norms and practices that restrict women's and girls' access to rights, justice, empowerment opportunities and resources, thereby undermining their agency and authority.

Specifically, the SIGI measures gender-based discrimination across four dimensions covering the major socio-economic areas that affect women and girls throughout their lifetime:

- The "Discrimination in the family" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's decision-making power and weaken their status in the household and the family.
- The "Restricted physical integrity" dimension captures social institutions that increase women's and girls' vulnerability to multiple forms of violence and limit their control over their reproductive autonomy.
- The "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's economic opportunities and rights.
- The "Restricted civil liberties" dimension captures social institutions restricting women's access to, and participation and voice in, the public and political spheres.

Each dimension builds on four indicators which, in turn, build on one to three variables depending on data availability (Figure 1). When there are no data gaps, each indicator includes one legal variable, one attitudinal variable and one practice variable. Levels of discrimination in the SIGI and its dimensions are assessed based on scores as follow: very low [0-20]; low [20-30]; medium [30-40]; high [40-50]; and very high [50-100].

The state of gender equality in Niger

Overall, Niger was among those countries classified as having very high levels of gender discrimination based on the SIGI 2023 score (60). For comparison, the average score in the Africa region is 40 while the global average is 29. Across the SIGI's four dimensions, the SIGI score shows lower discrimination in "Restricted civil liberties" (23) and "Restricted physical integrity" (34) and higher levels of discrimination in "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" (84) and "Discrimination in the family" (84).

Positive highlights and significant challenges

Positive highlights

- The 2024 publication of the latest edition of the Livret sur le genre, a gender booklet, reflects the government and the national statistics office's political awareness regarding the importance of gender statistics.
- Women's share among property owners and managers is above the West African averages however, gender gaps persist, and women lack access to the highest decision-making positions.
- Niger does relatively well in SIGI indicators related to citizenship rights and freedom of movement.

Significant challenges

- The dual legal system, where both state and customary law can be applied by jurisdictions to regulate personal matters and property ownership, makes it challenging to guarantee equal rights for men and women under all systems.
- Important legal gaps persist regrading gender-based violence, notably with respect to child marriage and domestic violence. Niger has one of the highest child marriage rates worldwide and girl child marriage is not illegal.
- Gender-disaggregated data on population's views on gender roles and responsibilities, particularly in the family and economic sphere remain scarce, preventing a more comprehensive understanding of women's rights and opportunities.

Social and institutional determinants of violence against women and girls

Violence against women is a global pandemic, with disastrous effects on girls' and women's health and well-being. Moreover, violence against women is rarely an isolated incidence, but often part of patterns of abuse sustained by deeply entrenched but harmful social norms and gender stereotypes. As such, it is more than an interpersonal issue - it is a wider societal problem with consequences on countries' development and welfare.

The United Nations define violence against women as wide range of harmful acts that are rooted in unequal power relations between men and women and that result in - or are likely to result in - physical, sexual or mental harm or suffering to women.² At the global level, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women (CEDAW) adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1979 and particularly the General recommendation No. 35 of 2017 recognise the importance of ending gender-based violence against women. In Africa, the Maputo Protocol³ calls on state parties to eliminate all forms of discrimination against women and adopt the needed measures to end and prevent violence against women. The SIGI adopts a life-cycle approach to violence against women and girls covering several types of violence (see Figure 3). This section assesses how social norms and legal frameworks determine girls' and women's risk of being subjected to any of these types of violence.

Violence against women

Practices and social norms related to violence against women

Violence against women remains a concern in Niger. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 14% of women aged more than 15 have experienced intimate partner violence at least once over the last 12 months.⁴

These levels of intimate-partner violence are rooted in its widespread social acceptance. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 54% of women aged 15-49 think that it is justified for a husband to hit or beat his wife under certain circumstances, such as burning the food, arguing with the spouse, going out without telling him, neglecting the children, or refusing to have sex. In comparison, 28% of women hold these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 37% across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning violence against women

Niger does not have a dedicated law addressing all forms of violence against women. Different forms of violence against women are covered in separate or general pieces of legislation. Moreover, the legal frameworks in place neither define nor criminalise domestic violence. Articles 283 and 284 of the Penal Code⁵, as amended, define rape as an act of sexual penetration committed against another person by

Child marriage

Practices related to child marriage

Child marriage remains a major concern in Niger, primarily affecting girls. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 66% of girls aged 15-19 were or are still married, divorced, widowed or in an informal union, compared to 9% of boys. In addition, 76% of women aged 20-24 were married or in a union before the age of 18,6 compared to a world average of 26% and an average of 31% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning child marriage

Article 144 of the Civil Code⁷ sets the minimum legal age for girls at 15 years and for boys at 18 years. Moreover, Articles 145 and 148-150 provide for exceptions to the minimum legal age, allowing minors to get married with the consent of the President, the parents or grandparents in cases where the parents are dead or absent. Niger reported to CEDAW that a legal reform is planned to raise the minimum legal age for girls to 18 in line with international standards.⁸ Finally, Articles 72-76 of Law No. 2018-37⁹ establish that the jurisdictions can apply customary law to regulate personal matters including marriage. Consequently, not all parts of the population are subject to the same law.

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C)

Practices and social norms related to FGM/C

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) is traditionally concentrated in a limited number of countries that have been well-identified and documented by international organisations at the forefront of the fight against this harmful practice. Yet, evidence highlights that FGM/C takes place across all regions, among indigenous and/or diaspora communities originating from countries where FGM/C is known to be common. In some contexts, girls are taken across national borders to undergo FGM/C in a country where the legislation against the practice is either non-existent or less strict.¹⁰

Based on the latest available data in 2023, 2% of women aged 15-49 who have undergone female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C), and 18% of women think that the practice should continue in Niger.

Legal frameworks concerning FGM/C

Section III bis with Articles 232.1, 232.2, 232.3 of the Penal Code¹¹, as amended, allow to prosecute acts of FGM/C on narrow grounds, namely under acts of female genital mutilation, removal of the genitalia, excision or infibulation.

Does the law criminalise FGM/C on narrow grounds only?	Yes	~
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow or encourage FGM/C?	Yes	!
Does the law take precedence over informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow, condone or prescribe FGM?	Yes	~

¹¹ Republic of the Niger (1961), "Loi n°61-27 du 15 juillet 1961, portant institution du Code pénal".

Note: The SIGI methodology assesses laws on FGM/C according to two scenarios: (1) criminalisation on narrow grounds includes laws that contain criminal penalties for acts of "female genital mutilation", "permanent altering/removal of external genitalia", "female circumcision", "excision", "infibulation" and "genital mutilation"; (2) criminalisation on broad grounds includes "mutilation", "harming of a person's organs", "serious bodily injury" and "bodily injury/hurt/assault." The presence of informal laws that allow or encourage FGM/C is proxied by the existence of nationally representative data on FGM/C or the existence of indirect estimates (usually used in countries where FGM/C is mainly practiced by diaspora communities), small-scale studies, or anecdotal evidence and media reports as reported by Equality Now, the End FGM European Network and the US End FGM/C Network in 2020.

Social and institutional determinants of women's economic empowerment

Women's economic empowerment is a cornerstone of gender equality and a critical driver of sustainable development. It enables women to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from economic growth, thereby reducing income inequality, boosting productivity, and fostering innovation (UN Women, 2018)¹² (Equality Now, 2020)¹³. As such, advancing women's economic empowerment is essential to realising the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and building resilient, inclusive societies. Beyond structural factors, social and institutional determinants hold an important sway on women's economic empowerment - including their access to resources and economic opportunities. This section offers insights to what extent social norms and legal frameworks support or restrict women's economic empowerment in Niger, providing detailed information on the following SIGI indicators: Inheritance; Access to land assets; Access to nonland assets; Access to financial services; and Workplace rights.

Inheritance

Legal frameworks concerning inheritance rights

Niger has a dual legal system of both written state and uncodified customary law. Articles 72-76 of Law No. 2018-37¹⁴ establish that the jurisdictions can apply customary law to regulate personal matters including inheritance. Consequently, not all parts of the population are subject to the same law. Evidence shows that under customary laws, women are typically excluded from inheriting land assets, and illegitimate children could only inherit their mother's but not their father's property.¹⁵

Access to land assets

Practices related to women's access to secure land assets

In Niger, women's land ownership remains a serious concern. Based on the latest available data in 2023, only 36% of women are landowners, compared to 55% of men. This translates in women accounting for 39% of landowners in the country. Across Africa, an average of 43% of men and 26% of women are landowners, with women representing 38% of landowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to land assets

Article 28 of the Constitution¹⁶, as amended in 2017, enshrines everyone's right to property. However, Article 1421 of the Civil Code¹⁷ sets forth that the husband manages the spouses' joint property and that the husband can sell or use them as a mortgage without his wife's agreement. Article 1428 further establishes that the husband administers all of his wife's property and can dispose of her property without her consent. Moreover, Article 8 of Order No. 93-015¹⁸ establishes that both customary and state law govern the acquisition of land. This is also recognised by Article 72(2) of Law No. 2018-37¹⁹, which establishes that the jurisdictions can apply customary law to regulate property rights for land and non-land assets. Therefore, not all parts of the population are subject to the same law.

In Niger, women's access to non-land assets remains limited. Based on the latest available data in 2023, only 39% of women own a house, compared to 74% of men. This translates in women accounting for 34% of house owners in the country. Across Africa, an average of 45% of men and 29% of women are homeowners, with women representing 40% of homeowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to non-land assets

Article 28 of the Constitution²⁰, as amended to 2017, enshrines everyone's right to property. Access to financial services

Practices related to women's access to formal financial services

Gender imbalances in access to financial services remain an issue in Niger, and the overall access of the population is low. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 8% of women have a bank account at a financial institution, compared to 11% of men. This translates into women accounting for 40% of bank account holders. In comparison, at the global level, 67% of women have a bank account, compared to 72% of men. Across Africa, on average, 28% of women have a bank account, compared to 39% of men, translating into women accounting for 42% of bank account holders.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to financial services

Articles 220-222 and 1538 of the Civil Code²³ regulate married women's right to open a bank account. In the case of separation of property as the matrimonial regime, the wife can open a bank account

Workplace rights

Practices and social norms related to women's workplace rights

As of the latest available data in 2023, women account for 49% of employees in a managerial position, ²⁴ compared to a world average of 25% and an average of 33% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available. But only 11 % of companies in the country are headed by women.

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Niger does not have data comparable to other countries on attitudes towards women's abilities and rights. For reference, across Africa, an average of 56% of the population believes that men make better business executives than women and 55% of the population agrees that when jobs are scarce, men should have more right to a job then women.

Legal frameworks concerning women's workplace rights

Articles 177-179 of Decree No. 2017-828²⁵ restrict women's employability, notably if the work could affect their reproductive functions or if the job would require carrying heavy loads. No such protective measures exist for men. Article 60 of the Interprofessional Collective Agreement²⁶ sets forth additional restrictions for women to work in industrial jobs. Moreover, while women are entitled to 14 weeks of paid maternity leave as per Articles 111-112 of the Labour Code²⁷, as amended, fathers have 1 day of paid leave as per Article 70 of the Interprofessional Collective Agreement. However, no longer paid parental leave is available.
