SIGI Country Profile

6 October 2025

SIGI Country Profiles are produced by the OECD Development Centre. Commended and supported by Italy's G7 presidency, these SIGI Country Profiles for Africa focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment.

The information and analysis contained in this profile are based on data from the fifth edition of the Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI) published in March 2023. The cut-off date for legal data is 31 August 2022; the cut-off date for quantitative data is 1 January 2023.

Foreword

The SIGI 2023 profile for Rwanda provides a comprehensive overview of the state of gender equality in the country with a focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment, as measured by the OECD's Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI). The fifth edition of the SIGI, released in 2023, assesses 140 countries based on the level of gender-based discrimination in their social institutions. These discriminatory social institutions encompass both formal and informal laws, as well as social norms and practices that restrict women's and girls' access to rights, justice, empowerment opportunities and resources, thereby undermining their agency and authority.

Specifically, the SIGI measures gender-based discrimination across four dimensions covering the major socio-economic areas that affect women and girls throughout their lifetime:

- The “Discrimination in the family” dimension captures social institutions that limit women's decision-making power and weaken their status in the household and the family.
- The “Restricted physical integrity” dimension captures social institutions that increase women's and girls' vulnerability to multiple forms of violence and limit their control over their reproductive autonomy.
- The “Restricted access to productive and financial resources” dimension captures social institutions that limit women's economic opportunities and rights.
- The “Restricted civil liberties” dimension captures social institutions restricting women's access to, and participation and voice in, the public and political spheres.

Each dimension builds on four indicators which, in turn, build on one to three variables depending on data availability (Figure 1). When there are no data gaps, each indicator includes one legal variable, one attitudinal variable and one practice variable. Levels of discrimination in the SIGI and its dimensions are assessed based on scores as follow: very low [0-20]; low [20-30]; medium [30-40]; high [40-50]; and very high [50-100].

The state of gender equality in Rwanda

Overall, Rwanda was among those countries classified as having very low levels of gender discrimination based on the SIGI 2023 score (19). For comparison, the average score in the Africa region is 40 while the global average is 29. Across the SIGI's four dimensions, the SIGI score shows lower discrimination in "Restricted civil liberties" (6) and "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" (15) and higher levels of discrimination in "Restricted physical integrity" (17) and "Discrimination in the family" (35).

Positive highlights and significant challenges

Positive highlights

- Rwanda has a robust legal framework that targets gender equality, particularly securing equal rights between men and women to land, non-land assets, and access to financial services.
- Due to strong legal blueprints that encourage equal rights in civil liberties, political involvement and women's economic empowerment, women in Rwanda have gained higher access to decision-making positions in the economic and political spheres.
- Based on the latest available data in 2023, Rwanda passed labour law amendments, including significant extensions to paid maternity and paternity leave days. A new family law was also enacted 2024, removing e.g. gender-discriminatory provisions regarding parents' right to child custody following divorce.

Significant challenges

- Gender-based violence remains an important concern, despite Rwanda having statutory laws that set various provisions on GBV.
- Data on population's view on FGM/C as well as family and households dynamics remain scarce, preventing a more comprehensive understanding of how gender roles influence women's rights and opportunities.

Social and institutional determinants of violence against women and girls

Violence against women is a global pandemic, with disastrous effects on girls' and women's health and well-being. Moreover, violence against women is rarely an isolated incidence, but often part of patterns of abuse sustained by deeply entrenched but harmful social norms and gender stereotypes.¹ As such, it is more than an interpersonal issue - it is a wider societal problem with consequences on countries' development and welfare.

The United Nations define violence against women as wide range of harmful acts that are rooted in unequal power relations between men and women and that result in - or are likely to result in - physical, sexual or mental harm or suffering to women.² At the global level, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women (CEDAW) adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1979 and particularly the General recommendation No. 35 of 2017 recognise the importance of ending gender-based violence against women. In Africa, the Maputo Protocol³ calls on state parties to eliminate all forms of discrimination against women and adopt the needed measures to end and prevent violence against women. The SIGI adopts a life-cycle approach to violence against women and girls covering several types of violence (see Figure 3). This section assesses how social norms and legal frameworks determine girls' and women's risk of being subjected to any of these types of violence.

Violence against women

Practices and social norms related to violence against women

Violence against women remains a major concern in Rwanda. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 38% of women aged 15-49 have experienced physical and/or sexual violence by a current or former partner at least once during their lifetime, and 22% of women over the age of 15 have experienced such violence at least once over the last 12 months⁴.

These levels of intimate-partner violence are rooted in its widespread social acceptance. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 45% of women aged 15-49 think that it is justified for a husband to hit or beat his wife under certain circumstances, such as burning the food, arguing with the spouse, going out without telling him, neglecting the children, or refusing to have sex. In comparison, 28% of women hold these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 37% across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning violence against women

Rwanda has a dedicated law addressing multiple forms of violence against women. Created in 2008, Rwanda's Law No. 59/2008 on Prevention and Punishment of Gender-Based Violence⁵, includes various provisions on domestic violence, sexual abuse and rape – including marital rape. Moreover, Article 149 of Law No. 68/2018⁶, criminalises and sets out the penalties for sexual harassment. However, it does not provide legal protection for sexual harassment in educational establishments or online spaces specifically.

Child marriage

Practices related to child marriage

Based on the latest available data in 2023, 3% of girls aged 15-19 were or are still married, divorced, widowed or in an informal union, compared to 0% of boys. In addition, 6% of women aged 20-24 were married or in a union before the age of 18⁷, compared to a world average of 26% and an average of 31% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning child marriage

The legal frameworks governing child marriage fully protect girls and boys, setting the minimum legal age of marriage at 21, without any exceptions.

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C)

Practices and social norms related to FGM/C

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) is traditionally concentrated in a limited number of countries that have been well-identified and documented by international organisations at the forefront of the fight against this harmful practice. Yet, evidence highlights that FGM/C takes place across all regions, among indigenous and/or diaspora communities originating from countries where FGM/C is known to be common. In some contexts, girls are taken across national borders to undergo FGM/C in a country where the legislation against the practice is either non-existent or less strict.⁸

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Rwanda did not have data comparable to that of other countries on the prevalence or attitudes towards FGM/C practices.

Legal frameworks concerning FGM/C

Articles 180 and 182 of the Organic Law instituting the Penal Code of 2012⁹ set the legal framework for FGM/C to be prosecuted on broad grounds of mutilation, harming of a person's organs, serious bodily injury or assault. Moreover, Article 114 of Law No. 68/2018¹⁰ further allows for the prosecution on broad grounds, namely under causing damage to genital organs.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on broad or narrow grounds?	Yes	✓
Does the law criminalise FGM/C on narrow grounds only?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow or encourage FGM/C?	No	✓
Does the law take precedence over informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws) that allow, condone or prescribe FGM?	n.a.	n.a.

Note: The SIGI methodology assesses laws on FGM/C according to two scenarios: (1) criminalisation on narrow grounds includes laws that contain criminal penalties for acts of "female genital mutilation", "permanent altering/removal of external genitalia", "female circumcision", "excision", "infibulation" and "genital mutilation"; (2) criminalisation on broad grounds includes "mutilation", "harming of a person's organs", "serious bodily injury" and "bodily injury/hurt/assault." The presence of informal laws that allow or encourage FGM/C is proxied by the existence of nationally representative data on FGM/C or the existence of indirect estimates (usually used in countries where FGM/C is mainly practiced by diaspora communities), small-scale studies, or anecdotal evidence and media reports as reported by Equality Now, the End FGM European Network and the US End FGM/C Network in 2020.

Social and institutional determinants of women's economic empowerment

Women's economic empowerment is a cornerstone of gender equality and a critical driver of sustainable development. It enables women to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from economic growth, thereby reducing income inequality, boosting productivity, and fostering innovation (UN Women, 2018)¹¹ (Equality Now, 2020)¹². As such, advancing women's economic empowerment is essential to realising the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and building resilient, inclusive societies. Beyond structural factors, social and institutional determinants hold an important sway on women's economic empowerment - including their access to resources and economic opportunities. This section offers insights to what extent social norms and legal frameworks support or restrict women's economic empowerment in Rwanda, providing detailed information on the following SIGI indicators: Inheritance; Access to land assets; Access to non-land assets; Access to financial services; and Workplace rights.

Inheritance

Legal frameworks concerning inheritance rights

While the statutory laws governing inheritance grant women and men equal rights, evidence shows that informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Do daughters and sons have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Do female and male surviving spouses have the same rights to inherit?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of daughters, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Regarding inheritance rights of female surviving spouses, does the law apply to all groups of women?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between sons and daughters when it comes to inheritance?	No	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, traditional or religious laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between male and female surviving spouses when it comes to inheritance?	Yes	!

Access to land assets

Practices related to women's access to secure land assets

In Rwanda, women's land ownership is relatively high. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 31% of women are landowners, compared to 39% of men. In other words, women accounted for 46% of landowners in the country. Across Africa, an average of 43% of men and 26% of women are landowners, with women representing 38% of landowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to land assets

While the statutory laws governing land assets grant women and men equal rights, evidence shows that informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory.

Access to non-land assets

Practices related to women's secure access to non-land assets

In Rwanda, women's access to non-land assets is widespread. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 42% of women own a house, compared to 47% of men. In other words, women accounted for 49% of house owners in the country. Across Africa, an average of 45% of men and 29% of women are homeowners, with women representing 40% of homeowners in the region.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to non-land assets

The legal frameworks governing non-land assets grant women and men equal rights.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to own property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide married women with the same rights as married men to use property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to own property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓
Does the law provide unmarried women with the same rights as unmarried men to use property and other non-land assets?	Yes	✓

Access to financial services

Practices related to women's access to formal financial services

Gender imbalances in access to financial services remain limited in Rwanda, and overall access to these services is relatively low. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 33% of women have a bank account at a financial institution, compared to 41% of men. This translates into women accounting for 47% of bank account holders. In comparison, at the global level, 67% of women have a bank account, compared to 72% of men. Across Africa, on average, 28% of women have a bank account, compared to 39% of men, translating into women accounting for 42% of bank account holders.

Legal frameworks concerning women's access to financial services

The legal frameworks governing access to financial services grant women and men equal rights.

Question	Answer	Assessment
Does the law provide women with the same rights as men to open a bank account at a formal financial institution?	Yes	✓
Does the law require married women to obtain the signature and authority of their husband to open a bank account at a formal financial institution?	No	✓
Does the law provide women with the same rights as men to obtain credit?	Yes	✓
Regarding access to formal financial services, does the law apply to all groups of women (regardless of race, ethnicity, caste, etc.)?	Yes	✓
Are there informal laws (customary, religious, or traditional laws/rules) that create different rights or abilities between men and women when it comes to opening a bank account?	No	✓

Workplace rights

Practices and social norms related to women's workplace rights

Women's access to decision-making positions in the economic sphere remains somewhat restricted. As of the latest available data in 2023, women account for 33% of employees in a managerial position,¹³ compared to a world average of 25% and an average of 33% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available. Only 22 % of companies in the country are headed by women.

Persisting gender gaps are upheld by discriminatory social norms that establish men as the main breadwinners and more fit to hold leadership positions. In Rwanda, 44% of the population believes that men make better business executives than women, compared to a 42% world average and an 56% average in Africa. Likewise, 42% of the population agrees that when jobs are scarce, men should have more right to a job than women. In comparison, 45% of the population holds these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 55% of the people across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning women's workplace rights

Articles 56 and 88 of Law No. 66/2018¹⁴ set out the legal framework for maternity leave and Article 52 of Ministerial Order No. 02/MIFOTRA/22¹⁵ guarantees four days of paternity leave. Following the data collection period for the 2023 SIGI legal survey, Article 5 of Law No. 27/2023¹⁶ and Article 58 of the Ministerial Order No. 02/MIFOTRA/23¹⁷ amended Law No. 66/2018 to increase paternity leave to mandatory seven days or twelve days in case of birth complications. However, there is no law mandating paid parental leave. Moreover, evidence shows that informal laws, to which certain parts of the population adhere to, are in some cases gender discriminatory with respect to women's employability and autonomy to register a business.
