SIGI Country Profile

6 October 2025

SIGI Country Profiles are produced by the OECD Development Centre. Commended and supported by Italy's G7 presidency, these SIGI Country Profiles for Africa focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment.

The information and analysis contained in this profile are based on data from the fifth edition of the Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI) published in March 2023. The cut-off date for legal data is 31 August 2022; the cut-off date for quantitative data is 1 January 2023.

Foreword

The SIGI 2023 profile for Sao Tome and Principe provides a comprehensive overview of the state of gender equality in the country with a focus on violence against women and women's economic empowerment, as measured by the OECD's Social Institutions and Gender Index (SIGI). The fifth edition of the SIGI, released in 2023, assesses 140 countries based on the level of gender-based discrimination in their social institutions. These discriminatory social institutions encompass both formal and informal laws, as well as social norms and practices that restrict women's and girls' access to rights, justice, empowerment opportunities and resources, thereby undermining their agency and authority.

Specifically, the SIGI measures gender-based discrimination across four dimensions covering the major socio-economic areas that affect women and girls throughout their lifetime:

- The "Discrimination in the family" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's decision-making power and weaken their status in the household and the family.
- The "Restricted physical integrity" dimension captures social institutions that increase women's and girls' vulnerability to multiple forms of violence and limit their control over their reproductive autonomy.
- The "Restricted access to productive and financial resources" dimension captures social institutions that limit women's economic opportunities and rights.
- The "Restricted civil liberties" dimension captures social institutions restricting women's access to, and participation and voice in, the public and political spheres.

Each dimension builds on four indicators which, in turn, build on one to three variables depending on data availability (Figure 1). When there are no data gaps, each indicator includes one legal variable, one attitudinal variable and one practice variable. Levels of discrimination in the SIGI and its dimensions are assessed based on scores as follow: very low [0-20]; low [20-30]; medium [30-40]; high [40-50]; and very high [50-100].

The state of gender equality in Sao Tome and Principe

For the fifth edition of the SIGI, published in 2023, no SIGI score could be computed for Sao Tome and Principe given missing data points on women's and men's bank account ownership, their safety feeling and trust in the judicial system. Nonetheless, based on available data, SIGI scores could be calculated for two out of four SIGI dimensions. For information, the average SIGI score in the Africa region is 40 while the global average is 29.

Positive highlights and significant challenges

Positive highlights

- Overall, Sao Tome and Principe has a robust legal and policy framework that promotes gender equality across different societal components, particularly when compared to other countries in the region. For instance, the statutory laws grant equal rights for women and men on access to land, non-land assets, and financial assets.
- In 2024, the government released their plans to advance on gender equality, including the implementation of the second National Strategy for the Promotion of Gender Equality and Equity.

Significant challenges

- Paid paternity leave is not available in Sao Tome and Principe, disproportionately influencing the division of unpaid care and domestic responsibilities.
- Gender-disaggregated data on women and men's ownership of land, non-land assets, and access to financial services remains scarce. The lack of data prevents a comprehensive approach on women's rights and opportunities.
- Female political representation remains an importance concern. Despite legislated gender quotas, women make up only 15% up the parliamentary seats in Sao Tome and Principe.

Social and institutional determinants of violence against women and girls

Violence against women is a global pandemic, with disastrous effects on girls' and women's health and well-being. Moreover, violence against women is rarely an isolated incidence, but often part of patterns of abuse sustained by deeply entrenched but harmful social norms and gender stereotypes. As such, it is more than an interpersonal issue - it is a wider societal problem with consequences on countries' development and welfare.

The United Nations define violence against women as wide range of harmful acts that are rooted in unequal power relations between men and women and that result in - or are likely to result in - physical, sexual or mental harm or suffering to women.² At the global level, the Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women (CEDAW) adopted by the UN General Assembly in 1979 and particularly the General recommendation No. 35 of 2017 recognise the importance of ending gender-based violence against women. In Africa, the Maputo Protocol³ calls on state parties to eliminate all forms of discrimination against women and adopt the needed measures to end and prevent violence against women. The SIGI adopts a life-cycle approach to violence against women and girls covering several types of violence (see Figure 3). This section assesses how social norms and legal frameworks determine girls' and women's risk of being subjected to any of these types of violence.

Violence against women

Practices and social norms related to violence against women

Violence against women remains a major concern in Sao Tome and Principe. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 27% of women aged 15-49 have experienced physical and/or sexual violence by a current or former partner at least once during their lifetime, and 16% of women aged more than 15 have experienced such violence at least once over the last 12 months.⁴

These levels of intimate-partner violence are, to some extent, rooted in its social acceptance. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 17% of women aged 15-49 think that it is justified for a husband to hit or beat his wife under certain circumstances, such as burning the food, arguing with the spouse, going out without telling him, neglecting the children, or refusing to have sex. In comparison, 28% of women hold these discriminatory attitudes worldwide, and 37% across Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Legal frameworks concerning violence against women

Sao Tome and Principe does not have a dedicated law addressing all forms of violence against women. Different forms of violence against women, such as domestic violence or sexual harassment, are covered in separate or general pieces of legislation. Articles 7, 13, 15, and 17-19 of Law No.11/2008 on Domestic and Family Violence⁵ set the legal framework for the criminalisation of physical, sexual, psychological and economic abuse, also covering marital rape. Lastly, Article 166 of the 2012 Penal Code⁶, enacted by Law No. 6/2012⁷ and Article 18 of Law No. 6/2019⁸ criminalise and set penalties for sexual harassment. These laws, however, do not include provisions on sexual harassment in online spaces.

Child marriage

Practices related to child marriage

Child marriage remains a concern in Sao Tome and Principe, primarily affecting girls. Based on the latest available data in 2023, 12% of girls aged 15-19 were or are still married, divorced, widowed or in an informal union, compared to 1% of boys. In addition, 28% of women aged 20-24 were married or in a union before the age of 18⁹, compared to a world average of 26% and an average of 31% in Africa – based on countries for which data are available.

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C)

Practices and social norms related to FGM/C

Female genital mutilation and cutting (FGM/C) is traditionally concentrated in a limited number of countries that have been well-identified and documented by international organisations at the forefront of the fight against this harmful practice. Yet, evidence highlights that FGM/C takes place across all regions, among indigenous and/or diaspora communities originating from countries where FGM/C is known to be common. In some contexts, girls are taken across national borders to undergo FGM/C in a country where the legislation against the practice is either non-existent or less strict. 10

Up until the SIGI 2023 data collection period, Sao Tome and Principe did not have data comparable to that of other countries on the prevalence or attitudes towards FGM/C practices.

Legal frameworks concerning FGM/C

Articles 141, 142, 149, and 156 of the 2012 Penal Code¹¹, enacted by Law No. 6/2012¹², set the legal framework for prosecution of FGM/C cases on broad grounds, namely in cases of harming a person's organs, seriously bodily injury, and assault. However, there are no legal frameworks that allow FGM/C cases to be prosecuted on narrow grounds.

¹² Democratic Republic of Sao Tome and Principe (2012), "Lei No. 6/2012b- Aprova o Código Penal".

Note: The SIGI methodology assesses laws on FGM/C according to two scenarios: (1) criminalisation on narrow grounds includes laws that contain criminal penalties for acts of "female genital mutilation", "permanent altering/removal of external genitalia", "female circumcision", "excision", "infibulation" and "genital mutilation"; (2) criminalisation on broad grounds includes "mutilation", "harming of a person's organs", "serious bodily injury" and "bodily injury/hurt/assault." The presence of informal laws that allow or encourage FGM/C is proxied by the existence of nationally representative data on FGM/C or the existence of indirect estimates (usually used in countries where FGM/C is mainly practiced by diaspora communities), small-scale studies, or anecdotal evidence and media reports as reported by Equality Now, the End FGM European Network and the US End FGM/C Network in 2020.

Social and institutional determinants of women's economic empowerment

Women's economic empowerment is a cornerstone of gender equality and a critical driver of sustainable development. It enables women to participate in, contribute to, and benefit from economic growth, thereby reducing income inequality, boosting productivity, and fostering innovation (UN Women, 2018)¹³ (Equality Now, 2020)¹⁴. As such, advancing women's economic empowerment is essential to realising the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and building resilient, inclusive societies. Beyond structural factors, social and institutional determinants hold an important sway on women's economic empowerment - including their access to resources and economic opportunities. This section offers insights to what extent social norms and legal frameworks support or restrict women's economic empowerment in Sao Tome and Principe, providing detailed information on the following SIGI indicators: Inheritance; Access to land assets; Access to financial services; and Workplace rights.
